Noise Evaporators: The other one is rather silly, but it may have a bearing. I talked with several chiefs on it. It is the possibility of blowing the evaporator down. It makes a hell of a racket. In my suggestion the order should be given out telling all engineers not to blow the evaporator out but blow it down, and never completely blow it out. That makes a hell of a noise.

Boat Stowage: The only thing is on those Liberty ships going over the Atlantic, if you get any heavy seas the boats have to come in. You have to do that on almost every ship deep loaded. It is to be expected.
